Aims and objectives

In the present and future knowledge economy, IP is crucial as it is part of a company's capital, an asset that can be traded and which supports capitalizing on competitive advantages. It is the responsibility of the IP Manager, acting on behalf of internal or external clients, to manage these issues.

The role of the IP Manager however demands a special set of skills. The IP Manager course was developed in cooperation with experienced IP managers from the International Institute for IP Management (I³PM) working in the industry and private practice. The skills required have been identified and included into the agenda. Each course day includes a mix of theory and practice. The course content has been chosen with regard to practical application in daily practice.

Who should participate

- Recently appointed IP managers, including those entering the IP profession in an IP manager position
- IP professionals with the role of IP managers
- In-house European Patent Attorneys or IP counsels, acting as IP managers internally
- European Patent Attorneys from private practice acting as IP managers for their clients

Prior experience as an IP manager is not required. Attendees without prior IP knowledge/education are advised to attend the introduction to IP module on the first course day.

Benefits

- The course helps companies and law firms further professionalise their teams in the area of IP management.
- The course is held on various days over the course of one month: two workdays per week and three Saturdays. For attendees, this means limited time away from the office and easier approval from management.
- The IP Manager certificate provides attendees with peer recognition in the IP manager profession.

About I³PM

The International Institute for IP Management I³PM is an association of IP Managers dedicated to promoting the field of IP Management, and thereby fostering the emergence of a dynamic IP-driven economy. I³PM gathers managers from diverse international corporations and organisations, forming a unique experience pool in the management and realisation of value from immaterial assets. With its contacts in industry and academia, I³PM actively supports the development and spreading of knowledge, as well as best practices in the field of IP management.

The certificate

Successful attendees of this course will receive a certificate.

In order to get the certificate, each attendee needs to pass both home exams and groupwork. Assessment is based on knowledge, skill and groupwork. Grading (pass/fail) is based on a competency grid established by I³PM, with help from a yearly survey of 100+ professional IP managers, in consultation with market experts (IP recruiters).

Home exams consists of an online questionnaire to test knowledge gained during the program and based on the competency grid. For each day/module, each participant must fill in the questionnaire (6-12 questions in the form of multiple choice and open questions). This is done after the session (open book, no classroom examination) and online.

The groupwork consists of consulting mini-projects under the supervision of a mentor who is an in-house IP manager. The team will demonstrate practical skills (cross-functional expertise) during the execution of the project. Before the program, attendees are allocated to group study, with a dedicated mentor and an IP management challenge (provided by the mentor).
